

Apple and Nike brace for China's wrath after Huawei ban

BRUCE EINHORN
Hong Kong, May 28

US COMPANIES COUNTING on China for a major part of their growth have targets on their backs as Beijing and Washington ratchet up trade-war tensions.

President Donald Trump's decision to blacklist Huawei Technologies, the Chinese maker of smartphones, while also threatening bans on other Chinese technology companies, could open the door to retaliation against US brands from hotels to sportswear to even Captain America. State media last week said China is 'well armed to deliver counterpunches', without giving specific details.

As companies await China's next move, there is uncertainty about what form retaliation might take. Companies might 'just have to read the tea leaves on how their business operations are being treated', Erin Ennis, senior vice president of the US-China Business Council, said in an interview with Bloomberg Television on Saturday.

China could use the template it honed in 2017 when relations with South Korea deteriorated over Seoul's decision to deploy a missile shield. The government curbed travel to South Korea, hurting cosmetics companies that rely on Chinese tourists, while local authorities shut most of Lotte Shopping's China stores, alleging fire safety violations. Consumers boycotted South Korean products, dealing a devastating blow to Hyundai Motor's sales.

There's a lot at stake, as China's fast-growing consumer market is a top priority for US giants looking for growth in a slowing global economy. Here's a look at the most vulnerable American companies with heavy exposure to the country:

The most obvious target is Huawei's smartphone rival Apple, which gets about a fifth of its revenue from China and manufactures its iPhones there. The Cupertino, California-based company has already been suffering in the region, seeing sliding revenue as consumers buy more phones from Huawei and other local brands.

Blowback from Trump's Huawei ban could cost Apple about 3% to 5% of its iPhone sales in China over the next 12 to 18 months, according to Dan Ives, an analyst at Wedbush Securities.

Huawei's founder, Ren Zhengfei, took the high ground in an interview with Bloomberg Television, saying China shouldn't punch Apple. If that does happen, the billionaire added, "I'll be the first to protest."

Despite trade wars and a slowing economy, 'the huge story still is China', according to the world's largest hotelier, Marriott International will open more than 30 hotels in China this year and has more than 300 new hotels planned for the country — more than half of its total in the Asia-Pacific region.
